ficult social problem and potential solutions to it:

Like I thought I should write a whole bunch about guns because, uh, like the police don't even know what to do about guns. Police don't know about guns. What should they do? Should they put the people in jail or [let them] have guns in their house? It's probably all right to have guns in the house if you, no wait, if you know how to use them. So I think it's going to be like a good story that people can read.

It [my story] might help people. Like if their mothers have guns or if their fathers have guns, like uh the kids can sit around and talk to them like "we shouldn't the it" because you shouldn't use it the superior of all. ever wrote as part of the Writers' Community, he described the history of a neighborhood park: his early memories of the park, its present condition, and possibilities for its transformation in the future:

The Park

There was a park. The park was a place for boys and girls to play, but the gang came smoking pot. So then the kids stop come to the park and then the gang came. The police come to look out so the park can stay clean. But the park never stay clean. The kids like me and you can't go to the park. This is not fair to the kids like me. I hope this will stop scop
